Matrioshka

Matrioshka is a system of wooden storage units which nest in one another. Its components (wardrobes, drawer units, sideboards) can be pulled out and arranged in any setting to the customer's liking.

Matrioshka, like the Russian doll it is named after, started off as a game, but it is a subtle one that makes you think about the mystery concealed behind the exterior appearance. It is an object that contains objects and, concurrently, protects our identity.

Placing one inside another reduce shipping cost and more important there is no need for assembling cabinets, you just pull them out and arrange it as you like. With this system moving house has never been easier.

Matrioshka set contains 2 wardrobes, 3 cabinets, 2 standalone drawers and 2 legs (bigger one and smaller one).

Additional elements of cabinets such as partitions and legs are stored in the back, not to violate the concept.
