Mount Everest Table

Mount Everest Table gets inspiration from the world of mountaineering to renovate with aerodynamic tension and a bit of irony all the interiors that are close to DIY and informal style. Climbing is also a reference for its athletic values: the economy of effort, the use of essential but performing materials, the epic to peak the summit.

The legs, made of steel laser-cut sheet, recall the form of a pickaxe, while the elastic rope, the same that is used for bungee jumping, is used to tighten the structure. The plywood table top, covered with HPL, drifts apart from luxury settings and privileges everyday contexts and usages.

Available in four colors – white, black, yellow and blue –

Mount Everest can be assembled very intuitively by the final user: the legs are inserted in the pockets of the lower side of the table top without recurring to screws, while ropes can be easily hung to hooks. Thanks to its determined and essential character, Mount Everest claims to furnish any context, from domestic to working environments.
